Expansion planned for executive branch

By Kevin Thompson

Six cabinet positions are being created by a reorganization of Student Government's executive branch, according to Student Body President Marc E. Williams, Huntington senior.

Williams said at Tuesday's Student Senate meeting that the new positions will increase the efficiency of Student Government because it will allow cabinet members to become specialized.

Williams said, "I'm not saying that we're not doing our job now, but we could be a lot more effective. I feel the way to do that is to reorganize".

"I've always been a stickler for organization and I think you can't be efficient if you have everybody running around in circles," he said.

Previously there were only three administrative assistants in the executive branch, Williams said.

In a memo from Rick Welch, former chief of staff for executive affairs, to Williams, Welch wrote, "... I suggest that we have a director of executive services and programs ... we will no longer have an administrative assistant. They will be called executive coordinators ... He or she will assist the executive branch in helping to serve in their area."

According to the memo, executive coordinator positions will be created in the areas of residence halls, fraternities and sororities, human relations, student affairs, academic affairs and graduate student affairs.

Troy Acree, chief of staff for the executive branch, said, "We can't afford to make this a restrictive organization. Why not open the cabinet with these positions and allow more people to come in."

Williams said senators could fill the positions and still remain in the senate.

Charles R. "Rusty" Webb, residence hall senator, said, "I think there is a constitutional question to be answered.

I have never heard of someone serving in two branches of government at the same time."

Joe Caro, commuter senator, said, "I don't think senators should serve as members of the executive branch, because the powers aren't separated (when senators serve in the executive branch)."

Williams said Student Government should not model the state and federal government so closely.

He said, "... senators sit on my cabinet now in the form of student representatives to faculty committees."

Williams said senators should be members of the cabinet because of their expertise.

WVU student's comments stir controversy

By Kevin Thompson

A disagreement over the role of the voting student member of the Board of Regents has been touched off by a comment in a newspaper from a candidate for student body president at West Virginia University.

The candidate, Jack Wilson, was quoted in the Daily Athenaeum as saying that if he got the BOR position, he would use it to benefit WVU.

"If we get better relations with the board it is more likely that, if the board ever has any money to spare, it would send it to WVU," he was quoted as saying in the Jan. 26 issue of the newspaper.

According to the article, Wilson and his running mate Sandy Cline said it probably would be easier to acquire money for WVU through the vote of the chairman of the BOR Advisory Council of Students than to request the money from the state.

In the Jan. 29 issue of the newspaper, he was quoted as saying that if he were elected student body president he automatically would be chosen to serve on the council.

According to the article, he said that once on the council he would have a good chance of being chosen for the chairman's seat and therefore having a vote on the BOR.

Marshall Student Body President Marc E. Williams said in Tuesday's Student Senate meeting, "Personally I'm astonished by such comments. I think it's detrimental to the whole higher education system."

During Monday's cabinet meeting he said, "At a time when higher education is receiving consistently lower shares of the state budget, leaders like Jack should work together to get more money for the whole system."

Williams, Huntington senior, said he gave an interview to the Daily Athenaeum without knowing the story would come out before the WVU election.

Wilson, contacted in Morgantown Tuesday night, said he was misquoted in the Daily Athenaeum and said the reporters who interviewed him did not understand the issues.

He said student members of the BOR naturally would have some biases toward their home institutions.

"I can see where if Marc Williams had been seriously misquoted, as I'm sure he has been, I would also be astonished."

Wilson said if he had been in Marc's situation he would not have given interviews on the subject.

The purpose of the position is to serve all of the 72,000 college students in the state, Wilson said.

He said he could not use the chairman's position to obtain extra fees for WVU. He said the money each institution is allotted is decided by the state legislature and the BOR only distributes the funds.

"One thing that does surprise me is that Marc got involved in WVU's student elections," Wilson said. "He intruded into an area where he shouldn't have intruded."

Marshall's 'forgotten child' remembered

By Jim Hooker

The "forgotten child" received lots of attention Tuesday night, and was promised a warm shoulder despite the state's current spending freeze.

The "forgotten child," affectionately termed by Ray Welty, Assistant Director of Housing, is University Heights, Marshall University's housing for married students located about four miles from MU on Route 60.

During an open house meeting at "the heights," (as the housing is known to many of its residents), James W. Matthews, Graduate Assistant for University Heights, said residents have long felt out of touch with the rest of MU, and they have a desire to bring a deeper sense of community to the complex.

Matthews told the group he is working on having The Parthenon delivered to the heights to bring Marshall and the heights closer together.

Currently there are 61 families living in the four apartment building complex that has 86 family units, according to Lola M. Stratton, Housing Administrator 1.

To help facilitate the residents' sense of community the Housing Office has designated an empty apartment as an "all-purpose community space," Matthews said at the meeting. Other suggestions concerning community relations at the heights were also discussed at the meeting.

Even though staircases at the heights have been rescored, and three playgrounds have been built, other maintenance and improvements to the buildings and grounds will have to wait or will at least be slowed until the spending freeze is over, Welty said.

Security for the complex was also discussed. Thefts and strangers using university property were some of the complaints voiced by residents to David H. Scites, Assistant Director of Public Safety.

Scites told the group that his men patrol the area mostly at night, and they would try to patrol more often if the need should arise.

Welty said he and Stratton have been working toward a more pleasant environment at the heights for several years.

Refreshments were served at the open house meeting sponsored by the Housing Office. The meeting was held in the new community space.

About 20 adult residents, and six toddler residents attended the meeting. The "forgotten child" appeared to be forgotten no more as six university officials representing three departments, housing, security, and maintenance, were also on hand.

Help, don't complain food committee asks

By Jim Forbes
and Ruth Giachino

Instead of complaining about the new hot food program which started four days ago in Twin Towers cafeteria, students are being urged by the Food Committee to cooperate in bringing about positive changes.

Dennis Daugherty, a member of the food committee said that he hopes the students will work with the committee instead of against them in the changing of the food line.

"Student Senate made a resolution to encourage the food committee to reconsider the proposal of the system that is being used now," said Charles R. Webb, a residence hall senator.

"The system that is being used now brings nothing but chaos," Webb said. "I can appreciate what the food committee set out to do since the major complaint of the students was getting cold food and the purpose of the new system is to keep the main entree hot, but it's very confusing."

The food committee has redesigned the route of the food line so that the cold foods can be picked up first and hotter foods will be last. Webb said this system is difficult to follow.

"I think the cafeteria staff should put arrows on the floor so we know where in the world we're going," Stephen R. Stonestreet, Sissonville sophomore, said.

Computer use is seminar topic

By Terri Bargeloh

The fifth in a series of seminars for graduate students and faculty on computer use is scheduled for 2 p.m. today in Prichard Hall Room 410, according to Arnold R. Miller, acting computer center director.

The seminars are targeted for the first-time or casual computer researcher, Miller said.

The seminars were designed to introduce the fundamentals of developing and running computer programs at Marshall University and through the West Virginia Network for Educational Telecomputing.

Today's seminar will be "Statistical Analysis System, SAS". This session will give general computer information and should be of particular interest to those in business fields, he said.

Three more seminars are included in the series including another on SAS, Friday, and two on "Statistical Package for the Social Sciences, SPSS" scheduled for Feb. 11 and 12.

All seminars, which will be taught by Allen R. Taylor, academic consultant for the computer center, are at 2 p.m. in Prichard Hall Room 410, Miller said.

Miller said the previous sessions, which began in January, dealt with the areas of access to computer facilities and bio-medical research.

The schedule of seminars this spring is an expanded version of previous programs.

"We're pleased with the response to the seminars so far," he said. "The seminars are a service both to us and those who are using the information, so we hope people will take advantage of them."

"Another problem with this system is that the main entree is unknown until you get to it, so how do you know what you want to eat with it?" Webb said.

"The food committee does plan to put a chalkboard up to name the main entrees," said Lisa C. King, Ravenswood junior, who represented Residence Hall Government Association at Tuesday's senate meeting.

"I feel that it is more walking but the food is hotter when you actually sit down to it. If the system does not work we will go back to the original way," Daugherty said.

"The food is just a little bit warmer but I don't believe it is worth the confusion and neither did any other students I've talked to about the new system," Webb said.

There is a food committee meeting at 3:30 p.m. today in the athletic dining room of Twin Towers cafeteria. Webb plans to present the resolution to the committee at that time. The meeting is open to all students.

"We want to encourage the food committee to reconsider the proposal. If it becomes a permanent system then I will strongly suggest a change in the system. I realize that this new system was introduced with good intentions, but it's just not working," Webb said.

College Bowl Penn. bound

By Cindy Ledsome

The Marshall University College Bowl team will participate in regional competition at Moravian College in Bethlehem, Pa., this weekend.

Starters for the first team have not been selected, according to Kurt T. Taube, Chesapeake, Ohio, graduate student and five-year returning member of the team. This year's team consists of five returning members and six rookies, Taube said.

Tuesday, the team defeated the University of Charleston in four of seven games, at Charleston.

MU scored 560 points to Charleston's 150 points in the first game, but was defeated 215 points to 275 points in the second round.

MU again defeated Charleston, 195 to 185 in the third game and followed that performance with two decisive victories in the fourth and fifth rounds, winning 355 to 90 and 395 to 80, respectively.

Charleston then defeated Marshall in the last two games by scores of 170 to 150 and 120 to 115.

Her...d rolls despite loss of three players

The Marshall University women's basketball team will play James Madison Saturday at 5 p.m. without three members of the squad who left the team.

Herd Coach Judy Southard said junior guard Debbie Solomon, Marshall's leading scorer, junior forward Karen Henry and sophomore guard Connie

Solomon left the team because of "irreconcilable differences that made it difficult for she and the trio to work together."

Southard said the best indication of how well she expects the team to play the rest of the season without the three women was Tuesday night's game against Concord.

"It was our best game of the season," she said of the Herd's 74-45 thrashing of Concord College.

"It was our biggest offensive output of the season, and we had excellent floor play," she said. "Also, our kids showed they are capable of hitting 80 percent from the line."

"We beat Concord by 29 points, and that is the most we have won by this year," she said.

"We have seven more games, and I anticipate we'll do just fine," Southard said.

Portable baskets delayed by broken door

By Patricia Proctor

Weeks after they were supposed to arrive, four portable basketball goals for Henderson Center have been delivered, but they may not be used by the basketball team for at least a few more days.

The goals arrived in Huntington Tuesday afternoon, according to Athletic Director Dr. Lynn J. Snyder

Snyder said the team may not be able to use the goals until next week because of a broken door at Henderson Center.

He said the parts to repair the door, which must be raised to put the goals on the basketball court, have been ordered but will not arrive until Tuesday or Wednesday.

"A truck backed into the door, probably about three weeks ago. We had to order parts to fix the door from the company that manufactured it," he said.

"The parts should be shipped out today or tomorrow and arrive Tuesday or Wednesday. Mellon-Stuart (general contractor for Henderson Center) said it can be fixed in one day, it's just a matter of getting the parts."

One possibility for getting the goals onto the basketball court still exists, Snyder said.

"Although it is broken, the door will come up partially, and the goals are unassembled," he said.

"We know the goals are too big to go on the elevator, but we may be able to fit them under the door. We will check it out."

Herd to tangle 'tough' Tech

Today's wrestling match with Virginia Tech could be the best one of the season, according to Marshall coach Ezra Simpkins.

The match is scheduled for 4 p.m. in Gullickson Hall.

"This should be the best match of the year," Simpkins said. "It will probably be very close and the outcome could be decided in the last individual match, in which Jim Mahan, Ravenswood sophomore, or Troy McNett, Kansas City senior, will wrestle as a heavyweight."

Tech overpowered the Herd 33-19 in a match at Blacksburg, Va., but Simpkins said his team has a chance to reverse that outcome today. The reason, Simpkins said, is that three wrestlers who did not compete in the previous match—Danny Ratliff, Quinwood sophomore; Preston Thompson, Cincinnati junior; and Steve Hart, Elkins junior—will be in the Herd lineup.

The team's dual-meet record dropped to 3-10 with a 24-19 loss to the University of Cincinnati, Jan. 28. And it placed seventh out of 11 teams Saturday at the Miami Open Tournament at Oxford, Ohio. Indiana University finished first.

Simpkins explained the importance of dual meets.

"At dual meets we want to do as well as possible and, at the same time, use them as practice," he said.

Snyder pleased by MAC change

By Patricia Proctor

Athletic Director Dr. Lynn J. Snyder said he is very pleased that the NCAA dropped eight Mid-American Conference schools to Division I-AA.

The NCAA announced Tuesday that 39 schools have been dropped from I-A to I-AA.

Every MAC school but Toledo and Central Michigan was dropped from I-A to I-AA.

The MAC competes with Marshall in recruiting, and Snyder said he is happy that it will be in the same division as Marshall and the rest of the Southern Conference.

"First of all, I think that is where they should be," Snyder said.

"The Southern Conference and Mid-American Conference are comparable football institutions that should be in the same division."

"Also, being in the same division should be a help to us in terms of recruiting," he said.
